

CARLTON IS CONVICTED OF BIGAMY

Jury Returns a Verdict in the First Case and He Pleads Guilty in Second.

JURORS OUT 20 MINUTES.

The Other Trial Had Been Begun, but Prisoner Stopped It by His Confession.

Frederick E. Carlton, upon whom Inspector Gross and his detectives sought to fasten the crime of murdering one of his wives, had an experience of Brooklyn justice in Judge Aspinwall's County Court today that will probably take a prominent place in the history of criminal procedure. In the course of a few hours Carlton was put through the ordeal of three trials on charges of bigamy and grand larceny, each proceeding being conducted with an expedition that would stagger a lightning-justice. He was convicted on the first charge of bigamy, the jury coming in while his second bigamy trial was in progress, whereupon he stopped the second trial and pleaded guilty. Immediately after his plea was taken he was put on trial for grand larceny. A third bigamy indictment was allowed to lay over.

All the benches of the tribunal were crowded with women, many of whom had come from neighboring States in the hope of identifying Carlton as their vanishing husband.

Carlton faced the battery of eyes unmoved. He smiled sardonically and shrugged his shoulders before the straining gaze of eyes and audible comments that were far from complimentary.

First Case Brought Up.

The first indictment charged that while he was the lawful husband of Willette Byrd, of this city, Carlton had married Miss Maria Gorman, of No. 36 Jackson street, Brooklyn, on May 1, 1901. He had married Miss Byrd on April 1891. Mrs. Gorman called the indictment in question, but the bigamy indictment was allowed to lay over.

Carlton confessed bigamy. While the witnesses were testifying at the second trial, the first jury came in with a verdict of guilty. When the verdict was pronounced, the prisoner turned to his counsel and said: "Well, I guess it would save time to plead in this indictment."

The lawyer accepted the suggestion, stopped the trial and offered a plea of guilty which was accepted. Then the clerk of the court began taking Carlton's pedigree. When he got to the question: "Married or single?" the bigamist smiled expansively, but made no reply.

"Come, come," pressed the clerk sardonically, "are you married or single?" The question was repeated, but Carlton only laughed. The laugh was infectious and even Judge Aspinwall joined in. When the Court resumed the bigamist smiled expansively, but made no reply.

"I guess you are married," said the clerk. "I guess I am married," said Carlton.

LATEST NEWS OF THE DAY

Equitable Director Answers.

Attorney-General Mayer announced today that thus far he has received but one individual answer from a director of the Equitable Life Assurance Society in the suit against the society and its directors. This director took the ground that whatever wrong-doing there might have been on the part of other directors he, at least, was ignorant of anything wrong. The Attorney-General would not reveal his name.

MILLIONAIRE RUNS UP STEPS, DIES ON "L"

Grosvenor Kills Himself in Saving Two Minutes' Time to Office.

JAMES B. M. GROSVENOR, millionaire Wall street man and corporation director, died today in a Third Avenue "L" train after running up the stairs at the Fifty-ninth street station to save a minute or two between trains.

Mr. Grosvenor was sixty-five years old and lived in his town house at No. 72 Fifth Avenue.

Leaving his home today he walked across to Third Avenue. As he started up the stairs he saw a South Ferry train approaching, and went up the steps two at a time. The train was just about to pull out as he gained the platform, but he managed to get aboard and sank into a seat.

His struggles for air attracted the attention of the other passengers. He was helped to a cross seat beside an open window and made comfortable.

He appeared to gain relief as the train proceeded downtown, but at Canal street slipped from the seat unconscious. When the train reached Chatham Square he was carried to the waiting-room on the station platform and an ambulance call was sent to Hudson Street Hospital. Dr. Cherry responded and said Mr. Grosvenor's heart had probably stopped as he lost consciousness.

Mr. Grosvenor was a son of the late William Grosvenor, of Providence, and a cousin of Mrs. C. Oliver Leland. He was married on Jan. 22, 1893, in St. John's Episcopal Church, Bridgeport, Conn., to Anna de la Motte Leland, daughter of the late C. de la Motte Leland, of Louisiana.

Mrs. Grosvenor, a staid and dignified housewife, immediately set about gathering a stable of show horses, and her acquaintance well known in the society that admires and likes to show the magnificent.

Mr. Grosvenor was President of the Fireproof Company and of the Grosvenor-Dale Company at No. 66 Beaver street. He was a member of the Union Club, the New York Yacht Club, Brown University Club, Conny Island Jockey Club and many other New York social organizations.

COUNT KNOWN ON BROADWAY DIES SUDDENLY

Luigi Cipriani, of Famous Italian Family, Succumbs to Nephritis.

The police of the West Forty-seventh street station were notified this afternoon of the sudden death last night of Count Luigi Cipriani, member of a wealthy and prominent Italian family. In his rooms at No. 156 West Forty-sixth street.

In many Broadway hotels Count Cipriani was well known as a "good fellow." Death was caused by nephritis, superinduced by alcoholism.

For several days the Count had been ill, but refused to allow a physician to attend him. Yesterday he was so much worse that Mr. Cipriani's landlady, sent for Dr. Birmingham, of No. 196 West Forty-fifth street. Dr. Birmingham saw the Count's condition was serious and sent for a trained nurse. During the night the Count died. The body was sent to the Stephen Merritt's undertaking establishment at Eighth Avenue and Nineteenth street.

An aunt of the Count, Mrs. Conrati, is said to live in Atlantic City. She stays at the Waldorf-Astoria when in this city. The Count is also said to have nephews in Baltimore. His attorney in Baltimore is said to be E. N. Rich, of the Union Building. According to Mr. Cipriani, the relatives and Mr. Rich have been notified and are on their way to this city to claim the body.

POLICE MAKE A HANDBOOK RAID.

Detectives Curry, Shea and Dale, of the West Forty-seventh street station, this afternoon raided a room on the second floor of a Rialto hotel, in Broadway, near Forty-seventh street, where, they allege, a handbook on the Brighton Beach races was in operation. They arrested one man on a charge of making book. He said he was William Hart, thirty years old, of No. 77 West Ninety-fourth street. They seized a quantity of racing sheets, charts and other racketing paraphernalia. About a dozen patrons of the establishment were allowed to go after their "pedigrees" were taken.

NO BURGLAR AT GROSSMAN'S, SAY POLICE

Declares Girl's Story of Assault and Family's of the Robbery "Dreams."

Acting Capt. Thompson, of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station, after an investigation into the story of Irene Grossman, aged fifteen, daughter of Mrs. George Grossman, a wealthy widow, of No. 522 West One Hundred and Forty-second street, that she was attacked by a negro burglar last night and beaten into insensibility, declared today that there was nothing in the young woman's statement.

He asserted that no burglar had ever been committed in the house and that no negro had entered it last night. Furthermore, he said, there is not a mark or scratch on the young girl to bear out her harrowing story of ill-treatment.

Miss Grossman said that a negro met her in the hallway, knocked her senseless and disappeared after writing demands for $1.00 on the backs of photographs. It was his fourth appearance in the house in as many nights, according to the family.

Before reaching his conclusion of "no burglar," the acting captain had declared it an "inside job."

Every night since Thursday it is declared the burglar has been in the house, and the family say he got away with $5 in cash and $4.00 in silverware. On two of his visits only the girl saw him. Last night extra guards were inside the house till 5 A. M., and Detective Brannan was watching the place from across the street at 6 A. M. when the girl says she was attacked in the hall and knocked senseless. She was found an hour later. Brannan saw no one enter or leave the house.

Mr. Grossman declares that he has retained to help whatever from the police, and had employed private detectives to run down the thief and his associates of his sister.

When a reporter for "The Evening World" went to the house John Grossman said:

"I must not talk of this affair. I have been warned not to by the police. However, I have lost all confidence in the men who have said they would protect this blackmailer and thief. I have employed private detectives. I can't understand why I have not had protection of some kind by the police."

WALSH NAMED AS MAGISTRATE.

He Is Appointed by the Mayor to Fill the Unexpired Term of Thomas McAvoy.

Mayor McClellan today appointed James J. Walsh a city Magistrate, to fill the unexpired term of Thomas McAvoy, appointed a Justice of the Special Sessions Court. The unexpired term has until 1909 to run.

James J. Walsh is a son of the late County Clerk Walsh and a nephew of the late Paddy Walsh, for many years Warden of the Tombs prison, and the father of Blanche Walsh, the actress. He is a well-known lawyer and is forty-six years old. He was born in this city and educated in the old Elm street public school, after which he attended Manhattan College, from which he was graduated in 1877.

He was for six years associated in law practice with the present Justice Fitzgerald. He served part of a term in Congress, after which he was unseated in favor of John Murray Mitchell, whom the House decided had really been elected from the Eighth District. Walsh was long a political lieutenant of the late Patrick Driver.

Walsh was a school inspector and has held a number of minor offices. He was an assistant District Attorney under Asa Bird Gardiner and has devoted himself to private practice since. He has always been a loyal Tammany man.

RESTORED HIS HAIR

Scalp Humor Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

AFTER ALL ELSE FAILED

"I was troubled with a severe scalp humor and loss of hair that gave me a great deal of annoyance and inconvenience. After unsuccessful efforts with many remedies and so-called hair tonics, a friend induced me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The humor was cured in a short time, my hair was restored as healthy as ever, and I can gladly say I have since been entirely free from any further annoyance. I shall always use Cuticura Soap, and I keep the Ointment on hand to use as a dressing for the hair and scalp." (Signed) Fred'k Busche, 213 East 57th St., New York City.
